1. Scampi: Gallo

After advancing to 12-1, there is a legitimate discussion to be had if this is the greatest team of all time. Admittedly, his legacy will be determined in the playoffs but at 12-1 with a point differential like the OKC Thunder, we are putting Scampi on GOAT watch. Even as Jonathan Taylor has slowed down recently, James Cook and Davante Adams continue to hum while AJ Brown picks it up. Marcus Mariota has been just as good as the committee expected replacing Jayden Daniels. The team is so stacked Kirk Cousins and Jameson Williams are stuck riding pine.

Scampi has now clinched the 1st seed and there is nothing that could happen next week to knock him from his perch in the power rankings. Credit Scampi, Gallo, BG and all the rest who helped put together this masterpiece of a season.

Playoff Scenario: 1 seed

Best Move this season: Stocking backup QBs like Soho used to stock bag.

2. Ginny Sack: Chris

Gin took the loss this week against his sometime nemesis Scampi, but it's hard to hold it against him. With Art of the D losing to SDZ, Sack can likely clinch the 2nd seed next week with a win. Tyler Shough has been surprisingly clean with two 18+ point games in his last three. When coupled with elite playmakers like Bowers, McCaffrey and Kyren that might be enough to put Sack in contention. We're still skeptical of the Shedeur stuff but we do have to give him credit for telling the media they are illiterate douchebags. He still needs Drake London to slap some duct tape on his calf and get back on the field for the playoffs.

Playoff scenario: 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th or 6th seed. This one is a little more complicated than Scampi. There will be 5 or 6 teams entering the last week of the season with a 9-4 or 8-5 record. In theory all of them are in the mix to be as high as the 2nd seed and as low as the 6th seed. With McCaffrey and Tmac on bye with London questionable to play, it's gonna be a close but we expect him to win and be the 2nd seed.

Best Move this season: Carson Wentz hour.

3. Work Ass: Sweeney

Back from the brink. Work ass has clawed his way back and now sits in 8th place after taking down Sweeney. He controls his own destiny for the playoffs. Win and in. He'll be the 8th seed. Kittle will be on bye for this decisive week 14 matchup, but the rest of Work Ass' stellar lineup will be ready to go as he takes on Gorlock. Trevor Lawrence was heard barking at his boys to get them riled up after the big win Sunday. That's the type of belief that Work Ass has instilled in these players. And that's why he'll be dark horse in the playoffs.

Playoff Scenario: Win and in. He has no chance of anything better than the 8th seed. If he wins, he'll play Scampi.

4. Pigs on the 7th Rank: Deez

Whispers from some well-placed sources tell us Bfield was blasting Chief Keef and ripping blunt in celebration of his playoff-clinching win over Gorlock this past weekend. As former Chief enthusiasts ourself, the committee can hardly blame his passion. The timely trades and gradual improvement Pigs has shown over this season has been astounding. When Tyreek and James Conner went down with season-ending injuries many on the committee thought he was cooked. Pigs trusted his scouting department to uncover value and it has certainly paid off. Rico Dowdle's emergence more than offset the loss of James Conner. Waddle stepped up his game after Tyreek was lost. And most importantly, he rostered Brissett all year. Brissett has finished as QB10 or better in five straight weeks and allowed Pigs to trade for Gibbs. With Mahomes, Brissett and Gibbs operating at full throttle, this team has the 2nd highest odds of winning the title per our model.

Playoff Scenario: He has the most points of any 8-5 team and could win a tiebreaker against SDZ or Art should they lose. His range of outcomes is as wide as 2nd to 7th. With an absolute cakewalk against Al Coke, he'll win and get the 4th seed.

Best Move this season: Trading for Gibbs.

5. Art of the Deal: Matt

We're about to find out if Art's long-planned strategy will work out. He's faced some headwinds over the past month or so but he enters week 14 with a chance at the 2nd seed and mounting another playoff run. He'll need Justin Herbert's hand to be as healthy as Herbert claims. He'll need to lean heavily on Breece, Javonte and Pickens if this is the year he finally reaches the mountaintop.

Playoff scenario: 2nd-7th are all theoretically in play. He'll beat Sweeney. and finish 3rd.

Best Move this season: Drafting Pickens and Javonte for a bag of Funyuns.

6. Cookie Monster Golf Cart: TJ

Are the chants back? CMGC-CMGC-CMGC. It pains the committee that CMGC most likely will not make the playoffs because his roster is unbelievable. Even now, he heads into the final week of the season 2nd in points for. He'll need to spoil JB's playoff seeding and hope for a miracle to find a way to steal the 8th seed.

Playoff scenario: Ger, Team Daniel, Work Ass all need to lose and CMGC needs to win and ensure they don't get outscored by more than 15 points by Work Ass.

Best Move this season: Probably stealing Jake "Tank" Ferguson from Scampi because he despises Cowboys.

7. Sweeney Deez and Zaukas: Mitch

Huge win for SDZ this week. With a heroic effort from Drake Maye on Monday night, SDZ was able to squeeze past Art of the Deal to get to 9-4 and avoid inclusion in the glut of teams at 8-5. Christian Watson has been an elite late season add for SDZ and has somewhat helped offset the loss of JK Dobbins, but the loss of Dobbins is what really crushed belief of a title run. Any hopes of a run now likely come down to can the vaunted trio that haunts Monroe's nightmares (Maye/Dak/Chase) combine for 80+ points per week. If not, SDZ is cooked.

Playoff scenario: Wide range of outcomes from 2nd to 7th. We're predicting 5th and a road matchup with Pigs on the 7th Rank in the first round of the playoffs.

Best move this season: He's worked the waiver wire pretty good to get adequate performance from Troy Franklin, Theo Johnson, Tez Johnson, Mac Jones and others. Without these timely contributions, he'd be waxing his dome alongside Al Coke.

8. The Jackson Brownes: North Willow

His receivers are among the worst crop the committee has ever laid eyes on and for some reason he's rostering Max Brosmer. Brosmer's performance Sunday was in the 0.3% percentile of all fantasy performances by QBs since 2006. Credit him right? The worst performance in that timeframe was of course the immortal Nathan Peterman game of 2017. Similar to SDZ, JB's only real hope of a run rests on a monster December from his three best players: Josh Allen, Bijan Robinson and Bucky Irving. He faces a tough game against CMGC to close out the season.

Playoff scenario: 6th place. He's going to lose to CMGC and stay in 6th place.

Best move this season: Keenan Allen draft pick. Found value.

9. Stewed C: Joey

Stewart Cink. He missed out on an opportunity to sneak into the playoffs with last week's evisceration at the hands of JB. Sitting nearly 100 points behind CMGC, he'll have to settle for spoiler in week 14. Actually, that probably won't happen either because he's going up against Scampi's buzzsaw. Stewart will likely enter the loser's bracket at 5-9 but he's very unlikely to actually lose out. We give him just a 6% chance of finishing last.

Playoff scenario: Cooked

Best move of the season: Kyle Monagai's hair.

10. Team Obama Sopranos: TK

This team clinching a playoff berth is a minor miracle. He spent over half his budget on two elite QBs in Lamar Jackson and Joe Burrow and both missed significant time to injury. He has 240 less points than anyone else currently in playoff position and in fact has the 2nd fewest points in the entire league. He's the anti-CMGC. But we have to give some credit. While guys were out with injury, he stitched together a roster with sneaky pickups like Kimani Vidal, Sean Tucker and Andy Borregales.

Playoff scenario: Clinched. Most likely the 7th seed.

Best move of the season: Implementing Gabriel.

11. Ger

Gerry Lewis blew his chance at controlling his own destiny when Andy Borregales outscored TreVeyon Henderson on Monday night. He'll now need to take down SDZ in order to have a chance at the playoffs. CJ Stroud's return put a dent in his team as he had to swap out Davis Mills (electric) for Devin "Lorenzo" Neal in the superflex. His team is in a bit of a bind, but facing SDZ without Drake "Drake Maye" Maye gives him a fighting chance.

Playoff scenario: Win, hope Work Ass loses and make sure Team Daniel doesn't win and outscore you.

Best move of the season: His waiver work all year left much to be desired so we probably have to say stashing Rashee Rice.

12. Team Daniel: Paul

This team might be cooked. He's lost four straight, scoring less than 90 in three out of the last four weeks. And now he's facing off against the playoff bound Ginny Sack. Daniel Jones has one leg. Tyrone Tracy just got knocked out. H-Dubz is getting ripped by his own coach. Brian Thomas has scored more than 10 points once all season. It's almost impressive that Team Daniel has somehow gotten to 6-7 with that disgrace on his team.

Playoff scenario: Win, hope Work Ass and Ger lose OR win hope Work Ass loses and outscore Ger by at least ten.

Best move of the season: Probably scooping up Oronde G right before he popped off.

13. Sweeney.: Connor

He lost a close one to Work Ass to fall to 4-9 last week. Geno Smith and Cam Ward continue to be abysmal. Trey McBride continues his all-world campaign now averaging 15 points per game. Nico Collins has returned to health and is tearing up defenses again with 19 points in three of his last four games. Unfortunately, nothing is enough to overcome his abysmal QB play.

Playoff scenario: Cooked

Best move of the season: Probably picking up Nick Westbrook-Ikhine

14. Life with Derrick

What a win by Derrick this week. On the backs of Bryce Young and D'Andre Swift, he slayed Team Daniel for his 5th win of the year. It was mostly due to a stalwart defensive performance in holding Team Daniel to 72 points, but still. Derrick has been eliminated from playoff contention.

Playoff scenario: Cooked

Best move of the season: Michael Pittman Jr for $2

15. Gorlock the Destroyer Schwartz: Simon

This team has some nice players but mostly has terrible players. It just wasn't Gorlock's year.

Playoff scenario: Cooked

Best move of the season: Harold Fannin Jr. for $1

16. Senior Al Coke Twins: Mikey

Playoff scenario: Winless

Best move of the season: Nothing
