

Free Chee Week 5 Power Rankings

1. Hand me the Piss- TK (LW rank: 1)

Piss stays at #1 this week despite the loss. Our projections like his remaining schedule and give him a 78% chance of finishing top three in points for at the end of the season. Having said this, should the committee really overreact to one arguably fluky loss to Sweeney.. We would recommend that Patrick Mahomes picks up the pace at some point. He has now gone 4 straight games without breaking 20 fantasy points. That's 9 straight games below 20 fantasy points dating back to last season. That is more than twice as long as the next longest streak of his career. Chat, is Mahomes cooked? It remains to be seen but the committee is concerned. Piss really needs Evan "Darius" Engram to get healthy so he can stop streaming tight ends like Elijah Higgins and Brevin Singleton.

Reason for optimism: Kareem "Ethan" Hunt may be a criminal but the guy can play some football. He comes in off the street, after spending the past year slapping back burgers at the local Wendy's, and runs for 69 yards on 14 carries. If he is to be the RB1 for the Chiefs, he'll be a difference maker for Piss heading into October.

2. Gorlock the Destroyer- Papi (LW rank: 5)

Gorlock takes a big jump this week. The main differentiator for him is Kenneth Walker III. After missing the last two games, Walker came in Monday night and looked electric. He was dicing up the Lions defense like it was cocaine in the McSwiggans bathroom. With solid QB play and some the trio of Jefferson, Walker and Cook the committee could see this team playing well into January. Credit to Gorlock for executing his draft strategy to perfection. He bet big on a few guys and thus far, they have all delivered. We heard one member of the league office at Soho compare this team building job to Dave Gettleman in his prime.

Reason for optimism: Justin Jefferson. The guy is just not even fair. Jefferson has a touchdown in every game so far this season and some people (Willow Street) might argue he's due for regression. He can't score a touchdown every week right? Wrong. Our data suggests he has actually left two touchdowns on the table so far and there's room for improvement there.

3. Sansa Ludacris- Chris (LW rank: 3)

After seeing Rashee "Sidney" Rice's knee blow up on Sunday, our initial reaction was that might be a death blow to Sansa. But further analysis shows he has amassed the type of death that would make John Calipari's 2015 Kentucky team jealous. Rice goes down, but Sansa still has 4 legitimate guys who could start on several teams in this league. Sansa did eviscerated by Life with Derrick this week. Giving up 148 points is a tough look for this coaching staff. Some are asking if the midseason name change will propel Life with Derrick to previously unforeseen heights. Sansa will bounce back with what some media members are calling the “the free win” against the Gotham Rogues next week. Due to the close proximity of the two franchises, it could be viewed as a rivalry. The committee knows better than that though. The difference between these two franchises is vast it would be tantamount to calling Rutgers and Raritan Valley Community College rivals.

Reason for optimism: Jonathan “Zachary” Taylor will avoid the IR. Taylor has been a monster in spite of Anthony “Tony” Richardson looking like a black Will Levis at times. If Sansa and the Colts are to achieve their goals, Taylor will need to be the focal point.

4. Stewed C- Joey (LW rank- 2)

We considered dropping the Stew even further, but cooler heads prevailed. “Buy hey man he’s 4-0! How is he 4th?”- Ger (probably). Our answer- do you know who else is 4-0? The Chiefs. Team stinks. We do have to admit this Jayden “Cedric” Daniels thing is getting out of hand. This dickhead has 3 games over 25 points in 4 weeks. So while having Gardner Minshew a QB2 is generally unsavory it might not matter if Daniels keeps this up. The Stew does face an uphill battle this week as he takes on Gorlock without his deep ball specialist Jameson “Irish Whiskey” Williams and his RB1 Saquon. Our model suggests Stew will suffer his first loss of the season.

Reason for optimism: As the Patriots continue to look like scrambled garbage, it becomes increasingly inevitable that the prodigal son Drake “Bell” Maye will soon be taking snaps in New England. This will give Stew 3 viable quarterbacks on a weekly basis and Drake might have the highest upside of them all.

5. Life with Derrick- Justin (LW rank- 7)

What was once thought to be a mildly bad team is turning into a juggernaut. Derrick (with the name change) demolished Sansa this week in dropping 148 points. Is that generally good? Trevor Lawrence is still not good, but it’s hard to find much else wrong with the squad. Derrick “Future HOF” Henry looks like me approaching Johnny Rockets when they have a BOGO deal. We have David Montgomery as a top ten running back for the rest of the season based on our metrics. And Justin Fields continues to get more comfortable in Pittsburgh. The concern here is depth should Derrick suffer any injuries. We’re not sold Emaunel “Woodrow” Wilson or DeMario “Buster” Douglas are particularly good backups. But we’re picking nits here. This is a championship contender.

Reason for optimism: The Bengals defense looks like absolute cock. So if they’re gonna win games, Burrow and the boys are gonna have to sling the rock which bodes well for Jamarr. He has over 200 yards and 3 TDs in the last two weeks on only 13 targets. The sky is the limit for Jamarr heading into October.

6. Marvin's Receiver Room- Zaukas (LW rank: 8)

Marvin is a textbook example of why the rankings committee relies on things like science and intuition. 300 years ago, we have it on good authority cavemen were using wins and losses to judge the success of their fantasy teams. Here in the 21st century we've ascended beyond such primitive measures of quality. Marvin has 464 points for this year. That is 6th most in the league and yet he has zero wins. His hopes of making the playoffs are dwindling (we give him roughly a 7% chance), and yet the underlying pillars of this team are elite. Lamar Jackson, CeeDee "On the" Lamb, and Aaron "Julius" Jones have been studs for this team and will do everything they can to pull it out of the gutter. We'd like to highlight the Nostradamus-esque ability of Marvin to predict the Dolphins would need to start Tyler Huntley and rostering him accordingly.

Reason for optimism: Can't keep giving up 140 every week right?

7. Cap Stoppers- TJ- (LW rank- 4)

Stop the cap had a one-week bump before falling back to the middle of the pack. Can Baker really carry this team? The Stoppers' success may hinge on the answer to that question because Aaron Rodgers looks cooked. Washed. Overrated. Antivaxxer. Putting up 9 points against Bo "Downs Syndrome" Nix at home is fairly disqualifying to the committee. The good news is the Stoppers still pulled out a victory to advance to 3-1 by beating HWYT. Rumors suggest HWYT was putting back Ketamine with the AI Coke Twins. Our investigative unit is still looking to verify. On the bright side though, Jahmyr "Joe" Gibbs is one of the most electric backs the league has seen. He moves faster than Papi's jaw at afters. This is still a playoff team, but the committee is losing confidence it can win the title.

Reason for optimism: Khalil "Mack" Shakir may never be a target hog, but he seems to be establishing himself as Josh Allen's go to receiver which will be vital for the Cap Stoppers down the stretch.

8. Sweeney.- Connor (LW rank- 9)

We still don't like his quarterbacks very much. Boone and Hoover have limited pass catching options and coaches who want to run the ball which limits their upside. But then Sweeney. goes out there and puts on an absolute clinic on Sunday slicing up Hand me the Piss to the tune of 127 points. Nico "Phil" Collins looks like the second coming of Megatron. So maybe the committee is just wrong. We thought D'Andre Swift should be flipping burgers in a Waffle House in South Carolina, not putting up 165 yards on the Rams. The front office at Monroe did a nice job putting this roster together. Our analytics don't see the title potential. 63% chance to make the playoffs but only 4% chance at winning the title.

Reason for optimism: Jayden Reed is nasty. Scholars still remember when he tore Rutgers up in 2022. With Jordan Love back healthy, he might be a WR1 for the remainder of the year.

9. Deserves to be Shot- Mitch (LW rank: 10)

Shot pulled out a much-needed victory on Monday night. Things were looking dire at halftime of the Lions-Seahawks game, but then Jared Goff came out with a China Lake and blew Seattle's defense off the field. Goff spearheaded a comeback for Shot to get him to 2-2 and in the thick of the playoff race. We have it on good authority Monroe was fuming when he woke up this morning. One neighbor even reported a hole punched in the wall of the lobby. "He won't even break 100!" Can you imagine? Now the committee thinks Shot has some serious concerns. His receivers are still the worst in the league by every available metric that we have (projected yards, catches, touchdowns, bench press, meal plans, etc). Josh Allen needs to stop alternating 30-point games with 8 point games. And Bijan "Mustard" Robinson now has an injured hamstring. Practice on Newark Street is not going to be pleasant this week.

Reason for optimism: Chase "Doc" Brown. The Bengals finally gave Brown some touches this week and he did not disappoint. 80 yards on 15 carries with 2 touchdowns. Generally speaking, that's the type of performance Willow Street would kill for. If Brown continues to improve he'll be a force to be reckoned with come playoff time.

10. Alexander's Unreal Team- Deez (LW rank: 6)

Deez. He takes a big tumble this week after a very poor showing against Deserves to be shot. He can't fall any further than this though. Deez still employs two real quarterbacks although Mikey might be right in calling Caleb Williams a "bad bitch". And he has no obviously terrible players in the lineup except Kyle "Busch" Pitts. There just isn't a lot of "boom" potential with these guys. Cement boots has been well covered so no need to belabor the point. Amari Cooper still catches pucks from Deshaun Watson. At least Tracy McGrady seems to have figured out his chemistry with Jayden Daniels. We expect Deez to bounce back in a big way this week as he takes on fellow Bloomfield inmate Hand me the Piss.

Reason for optimism: It's been nearly ten years since Joseph "Stalin" Mixon broke a girls jaw after she called him a hard r. And he's about to be back on the field after dealing with a sore ankle. Could be a monster week for Mixon.

11. Work Ass- Sweeney (LW rank: 10)

This is an intriguing roster aligned at Grand Street. Only one Caucasian on the entire team. It really makes you think. Maybe Drake London could qualify? We'll check with the folks at 23andme and follow up. Jalen Hurts has been playing like Desmond Ridder in real life but fantasy wise is still a top ten QB in fantasy so far. Beyond that, this team is approaching cooked territory. Anthony Richardson, DeVonta Smith, Tank Dell and Christian Watson are all nursing injuries which leaves Work Ass reliant on stalwarts like Zeke (Washed), Jahan Dotson (Not Good) and Braelon Allen (Kinda Like Him). After a shellacking at the hands of the Gotham Rogues (unthinkable), Work Ass is in dire need of a win this against HWYT. We expect Brent Musberger and Kirk Herbstreit to be on the call for that matchup as it is a heavyweight collision. Two titans roll in winless, limping, and hungry. One will leave with his first victory of the season. Must see TV.

Reason for optimism: Not everybody can get injured right?

12. Champagne Suitcase Heart Emoji- Gerry Lewis (LW rank: 13)

He's moving on up. Compared to some of the other rosters being thrown out there on a weekly basis, Ger's is not so bad anymore. Credit to Austin for approaching this rebuild like the Nets in 2017. Unfortunately, his worst case scenario might be materializing where he drafted 3 quarterbacks and two of them are getting benched. Bryce "Nick" Young is already riding pine and Will Levis joined him this week after being supplanted by Mason "Plumlee" Rudolph. At least Sam Richard Darnold continues to tear it up north of the border. Now for the bad news. He's going to be working the wire for a wide receiver and a superflex this week due to injuries and byes. Ty "son" Chandler and Carson Steele are the only players on his bench who aren't injured or on bye. Some of the talented gentlemen on the wire this week include Justin Watson and Jordan Whittington. If Ger were in Hoboken this week the committee might ask him something along the lines of "Are you retarded?"

Reason for optimism: At least you have the first pick in waivers this week right?

13. WHERESTUA- Matt (LW rank: 12)

It was a tough week for Tua as he went up against Gorlock but dropping 90 points was reasonably respectable. He takes on Sweeney. this week in what many scholars around the league are deeming a "very winnable game". If Deshaun Watson continues his streak of putting up decent point totals, Stefon Diggs keeps getting comfortable in Houston and Jaxon Smith-Njigba can keep hoarding targets this team can stay out of the basement. Our projections continue to give him a slim chance of the playoffs without Tua returning to the field. However, there was some promising news on that front. Our scouts saw Tua lurking in a hat on the sidelines Monday night. Rumors suggest he may have even been ripping smelling salts with Jevon Holland at one point. If true, this would be remarkable progress for Tua's comeback.

Reason for optimism: Tank Bigsby might just be flat out better than Travis Etienne. Etienne is addicted to fumbling.

14. Senior Al Coke Twins- Mikey (LW rank- 14)

The committee would like to issue an apology for disrespecting this team last week and forgetting to including "Senior" in their name. Having said that, the twins dominated this week. Putting up 144 points, they took down Marvin (he has terrible luck) to secure the first win of the season. Nabers is a truck and everyone knows it at this point. But this win was powered by a dominant performance from the San Francisco Defense and Chuba Hubbard. He even left Josh Downs on the bench with 18 points. The committee will be adjusting our projections to account for the fact that hanging with the ketamine crew markedly improved Al Coke's coaching ability. To be fair, if Taysom Hill gets two rushing touchdowns every week Joey might burn down the superdome.

Reason for optimism: There is all you can eat wings at Black Bear tonight and the silent waiter will be there. You can bet Al Coke will be in attendance.

15. Gotham Rogues- Joe (LW rank: 15)

Bronny James was kinda dialed in for the Broncos this week against the Jets. He sliced them up for 77 yards! Ladd McConkey might be a player and Stroud is a stud. Other than that this team is positively cooked. Gotham was just lucky to play a pack of retards this week which helped him get a win. Despite having a roster that rivals the 2011 Bobcats, the Rogues aren't out of the playoff race because they've already secured two wins. Zamir White had a huge game at least. 17 carries for 50 yards. Our best statisticians cannot understand how the fuck the Raiders are still giving that sack of shit carries. They'd be better off getting Maurice Jones-Drew (300 lbs now) out of the tv studio and giving him some carries.

Reason for optimism: Can't even cap, we are believers in Roschon Johnson. If the Bears give him some carries, it could be huge for Gotham. Oh and Davante "Eric" Adams requested a trade today. Nobody knows if he has a hamstring but can't hurt to get out of Vegas.

16. Here Without You Tishman- Gallo (LW rank: 16)

Back-to-back weeks at 16. It's not a pretty sight. The once great Tyreek Hill looks like a petrified high schooler without King Tua to throw him the ball. Mark Andrews has been about effective as Volmar at tight end this year. And AJ Brown remains sidelined with a bad hamstring. At least he's rostering the stealth sleeper Roman "Harper" Wilson. Some of our projections think a huge second half breakout could be coming for Wilson. He has outstanding speed and is a proven route runner. He just needs an opportunity to break out. Realistically, the best news for HWYT is that Jordan Love is back and he is slinging. Love throw for almost 400 yards and 4 touchdowns. Even with the 3 picks, it doesn't matter. HWYT might be able to get a couple wins if he keeps that up.

Reason for optimism: At least HWYT enjoys guzzling food challenges. And Bucky...
