

Free Chee Week 4 Power Rankings

1. Hand me the Piss- TK (LW rank: 2)

The committee crowns a new #1 this week. Piss might be stacked. Patrick Mahomes hasn't even played particularly well yet and Piss is cruising to a 3-0 record. While Mahomes slumps, Dak "Black" Prescott, Breece Hall and Chris Godwin have picked up the slack. Dak was a certified monster in garbage time on Sunday, piling up nearly 30 points as he staged a comeback against the Ravens. But the main reason Piss had to pass Stewed C for the top spot in the rankings is depth. Piss has 5 receivers who are legitimate options to put in the lineup with Brian Thomas Jr, Darnell Mooney and Diontae Johnson riding pine on this all star roster. We fully expect Bfield will be receiving a telegram from Newark Street to explore trade opportunities sooner rather than later.

Next up: Piss takes on Sweeney. in week 4 in a matchup of playoff contenders. Sweeney. has been taking quite the victory lap after his lopsided decimation of Deserves to be Shot. Some on the committee will be placing wagers on Piss ML in the next few days.

2. Stewed C- Joey (LW rank: 1)

Stewed C falls one spot this week through no fault of his own. He maintains his undefeated record and has the most points in the league. Jayden "Stormy" Daniels might be a fantasy monster this year. He took a machete to Cincinnati's defense last night, probably ruining their chances of a playoff berth. With two 28-point outings in 3 weeks, Daniels is right up there among the elite QBs in the league for the rest of the season. And much to the chagrin of Giants fans, Saquon "Charles" Barkley continues his revenge tour after Joe Schoen offered him a contract worth 100 yen and three packs of gummy bears a week. Saquon ran for 147 yards and two tuds in handing the Saints their first loss of the season. The long-term concern for Stewed lies in the fact that he doesn't have a reliable QB2. Minshew may get benched if Antonio "Throws Guns off Bridges" Pierce is to be believed and Drake Maye has yet to see the field.

Next up: Stewed takes on Ger after it looks like Ger's team is rounding into form a little bit. Our model still favors Stewed by 12.3 points.

3. Sansa Ludacris- Chris (LW rank: 3)

Sansa stays in the 3rd spot this week. His victory over the master of AI Coke was powered by dominant performances from Kyren Williams, Rashee Rice and Jonathan "Chester" Taylor. Even with relatively poor performances from Kyler Murray and Derek "The Driver" Carr, Sansa cruised to a 29-point win. That's how you know this team has an elite coaching staff who knows how to build a game plan. That's something Here Without You Tishman might want to investigate. The committee is concerned he may be distracted this week in his game prep for Tony the Phenom as he guzzles 39 Miller Lites at the Giants game. Something the committee will be watching closely come Sunday.

Next up: Sansa faces off with Tony the Phenom and will have to build a defensive strategy to shut down Trevor “The Long-Haired Retard” Lawrence.

4. Cap Stoppers- TJ (LW rank: 8)

Stop the Cap. The Stoppers took advantage of a pretty not good showing from Work Ass to cruise to a 25-point win. Aaron “Mister” Rodgers, DK “Donkey Kong” Metcalf and Dallas Goedert combined for 61 points to lead the way. Most importantly though, the committee was Nostradamus last week when it suggested “wait for Khalil Shakir’s breakout”. Sure enough, Shakir looked like prime Wes Welker on Monday slicing through the Jacksonville defense for 16 points. Things are really looking up as they have the easiest strength of schedule in the league over the next month. Our metrics give Cap Stoppers a 74% chance of securing a playoff berth.

Next up: A matchup with perhaps the worst team ever assembled.

5. Gorlock the Destroyer- Papi (LW rank- 4)

The committee was torn on whether to drop Gorlock. Cap Stoppers barely edged him out based on general gut feeling. Gorlock had a tough loss to Hand me the Piss, but the fundamentals remain strong with his lineup. Joe Burrow finally got his shit together to dice up the Football Team on Monday night and Geno Smith remains one of the steadier veteran options in the league. Gorlock’s star duo of Justin Jefferson and James Cook will keep the team afloat as they wait for Kenneth Walker III to get healthy. With three straight games against teams with winning records, Gorlock needs to reassess the dual Cleveland running back strategy. Jerome “Gerald” Ford has been reasonably effective for such a bad offense, but D’onta Foreman deserves to be shot. Interestingly, he continues to roster three tight ends, and we project none of them as top 20 tight ends.

Next up: Battle of titans against WHERESTUA. Must-see TV when Jonnu Smith and Dalton Schultz go head-to-head.

6. Alexander’s Unreal Team- Deez (LW Rank: 11)

Bfield made some serious adjustments this week and coaxed an elite performance out of his guys. He is our biggest riser this week moving from 11th place all the way up to 6th. The committee would like to be credited for its lack of bias. Caleb Williams stopped acting like a homo long enough to throw up 19 points. Terry “Big Mac” McLaurin finally got some targets more than 2 yards down the field. And Amari “DB” Cooper broke out of his slump to decimate the Giants defense for two touchdowns. Cement Boots has picked up right where he left off last year dialing in between 8 and 12 points every week. If Caleb and Stafford keep producing, there are enough horses on this team to make Alexander's Unreal Team a real playoff contender.

Next up: Alexander's Unreal Team faces off with a reeling Deserves to be Shot. Deserves might need Allen to drop 90 to pull the upset there.

7. Tony the Phenom- Justin (LW rank: 6)

Is it possible Phenom has two elite quarterbacks in Justin "Mrs." Fields and Bo Nix? It's a situation the committee is certainly monitoring closely. We're beginning to wonder if Trevor Lawrence is just Brock Osweiler with long hair. In any case, with 3 QB options and some nasty backs and receivers Phenom is going to make a few corpses this year. Jamarr Chase and King Henry broke out this week to lead Phenom to the highest point total in the league. He doubled up the Gotham Rogues. I couldn't imagine being the Rogues' front office right now. We've been hearing whispers Phenom is working the phones to turn one of his stars into some legitimate depth. The phrase "this will help you more than it helps me" was said several times, per sources.

Next up: Phenom battles Sansa Ludacris in a matchup of the top two scorers in the league in week 3. Our model slightly favors Sansa with Kyler "Bill" Murray carrying him to victory.

8. Marvin's Receiver Room- Zaukas (LW rank: 7)

Nobody gets how this team is 0-3. Marvin is 7th in points for but 1st in points against. Does he need to replace his defensive coordinator? People are asking. A stellar Lamar game was wasted in a close defeat against Alexander's Unreal Team. With only one real quarterback on the roster, Marvin is in a bind when CeeDee Lamb doesn't go off. Certain teams with excess quarterbacks are quietly putting feelers out to see if Marvin might be interested in acquiring another quarterback. Not to name names, but Andy Dalton and Gardner Minshew seem like prime candidates here. Just the committee's opinion. No word yet on what the front office on Hudson Street thinks. This week is a must win for Marvin if he hopes to turn this around and make the playoffs. Our model gives him a 6% chance at the playoffs should he lose this week.

Next up: Al Coke Twins. If ever there was a get right week, this would be it. Al Coke is still without Christian McCaffrey and now Brock Purdy is rumored to be hurt. Having said that, Malik Nabers might be unstoppable enough to carry Al Coke to victory.

9. Sweeney.- Connor (LW rank: 9)

It was a very close call between these next 3 teams in the rankings. Sweeney. is coming off a huge win against Deserves to be Shot, but was it a fluke? League models suggest Deserves to be Shot would win a rematch 74% of the time. The good news for Sweeney. is that Malik Nabers might be so nasty that he can carry Daniel “Boone” Jones to 18 points per week. Credit to Malik. The injury to Justin Herbert doesn’t affect our projections much because Sweeney. is rostering both of his backups. Interesting use of roster spots but perhaps his intel tells him Harbaugh intends to run a 2-QB system if Herbert misses time. On the flip side, D’Andre Swift is terrible. He’s averaging 1.8 yards per carry so far this year and even worse, he smells like cock. Zach Charbonnet is pretty good though.

Next up: Sweeney. takes on Hand me the Piss in a matchup with the #1 team in the nation.

10. Tied- Work Ass- Sweeney (LW rank: 10) and Deserves to be Shot- Mitch (LW rank: 5)

We have our first ever tie in the rankings. Both these teams are receiving the same number of votes for the 10th spot and thus will be tied here. In some ways they’re mirror images of each other. Both with two solid QBs in the Hurts/Richardson and Allen/Goff combos, they have gaping holes elsewhere on their rosters. Deserves to be Shot is essentially starting high schoolers at receiver. Anthony Richardson is allergic to AD “Armorius Dedric” Mitchell, so he is seeing as many targets as me. Ja’Lynn Polk can’t do shit in the Pats offense. Josh Palmer is hurt like a faggot. And Xavier Legette talks like Mikey late night. This leaves Quentin Johnston as the only reliable receiver for Deserves to be Shot. For Work Ass, he has receivers aplenty but nobody at running back. Jaylen “Elizabeth” Warren is being outshone by Najee so far this year, Zeke has been running like Biden, and Trey Benson remains mostly a backup. This leaves Braelon “Tim” Allen as Work Ass’ only hope. A trade between these two former Newark Street residents could prove fruitful for both.

Next up: Work Ass takes on the Gotham Rogues in a classic loser shaves head matchup. A viewing party is expected to take place at Willow Street for this epic clash. Deserves to be Shot heads to Bfield to take on Alexander’s Unreal Team.

12. WHERESTUA- Matt (LW- 12)

Tua holds steady in the 12th spot. He suffered a tough defeat at the hands of Ger this week as Ger’s team got its shit together. Unfortunately, Tua’s season likely hinges on actual Tua coming back from a concussion. Many loudmouths have suggested he retire but the committee knows Tua is a true gladiator who will be back out there this season. We project a week 7 return after consulting with our in-house neurologist Charles “Dickens” Darwin. If this team can get Tua back, they have enough complementary talent to make a playoff run. Deshaun Watson is pretty bad at real football but he’s still a functional fantasy quarterback and the Josh Jacobs- Stefon Diggs duo should see enough volume to put up some points.

Some rival GMs were fuming that Tua is rostering Russell Wilson and Michael Penix as both have potentially huge value if something should happen to Kirk or Justin Fields.

Next up: WHERESTUA will host Gorlock as a home underdog with the hope an upset will push them to 3-1 and give them some cushion in the playoff race.

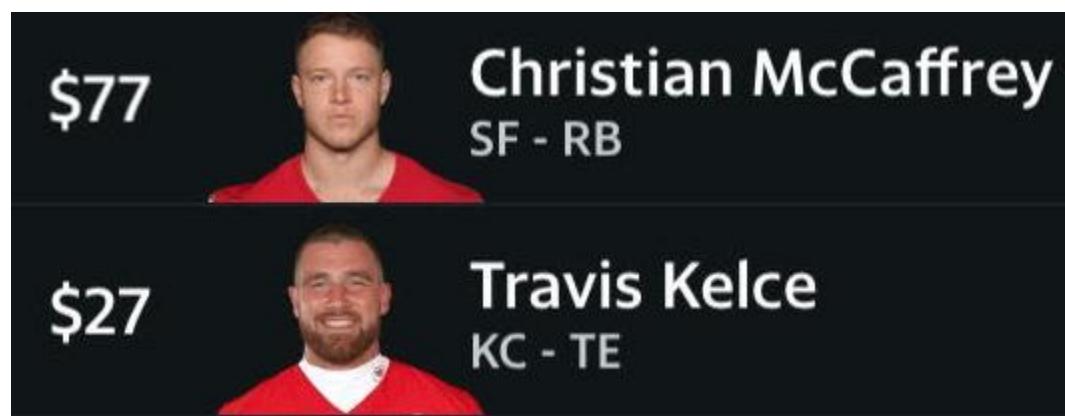

13. Champagne Suitcase Heart Face (emoji stuff)- Ger (LW Rank:14)

The committee remains low on Ger's squadron but there is serious potential for upward mobility with this squad. Our main concern for Ger's team going forward is the chance Will "Beavis" Levis gets benched for Mason Rudolph because he can't stop going full retard. Sam Richard Darnold looks like he's gonna be a player all year and Ger may have fleeced the league getting him for only $24. Throwing the ball to Jefferson every play is not bad right? If Ger can tread water until Cooper Kupp and Isiah "Thomas" Pacheco returns from injury, he could make a run. Our model only gives him a 28% chance of reaching the playoffs, however. Let Bryce play.

Next up: Stewed C travels to Austin to face Ger in a matchup that heavily favors Stewed C. We will be monitoring the afters situation closely the night before the game. Should Stewed stay out late, it could lead to a disastrous coaching performance and an upset loss.

14. Al Coke Twins- Mikey (LW Rank: 16)

Al Coke still lost but this was a very encouraging performance from your boy. He actually slapped up the 4th highest point total in the league this week but ran into the buzzsaw that was Sansa Ludacris. Let's start with the bad. McCaffrey is unlikely to play anytime soon, Brock Purdy is nursing a sore back and Travis Kelce remains a retarded pussy. However, Malik Nabers is the best Giants player since peak Odell and maybe even better than that. Yes, he buries Saquon. If Daniel "Boone" Jones continues to force feed Nabers targets, we don't anticipate Al Coke returning to the bottom of the rankings.

Next up: Al Coke takes on Marvin's Receiver Room in a struggle of winless teams. The committee understands Al Coke will be watching this matchup solo at Black Bear this week rather than in the war room at McSwiggins.

15. Gotham Rogues- Boyle (LW rank: 13)

Last week we suggested that maybe the Rogues deserved to be higher. We couldn't have been more wrong. In one of the more shameful showings this league has seen, the Rogues were doubled up by Phenom. Can you guess the only member of the Rogues' lineup who scored more than 12.1 points this week? Peep the answer at the end of this section. This team flat out stinks. Stinks. CJ Stroud talks too much and has Sweeney's hair. Javonte Williams looks like Bronny James on steroids. And somehow, he left his two highest scoring position players on the bench. I couldn't imagine it. But we'd like to highlight one player. Zamir "Betty" White. Zamir (who the Rogues spent $10 on) has 32 carries this year. There are 34 players with at least 30 carries through 3 weeks and Zamir ranks 32nd in yards per carry out of that group. This is the Rogues RB1, and he has totaled a whopping 12.3 points through 3 weeks. Is that generally good?

(Seattle defense led the Rogues with 14 points this week)

Next up: Work Ass takes on the Gotham Rogues in a classic loser shaves head matchup. Viewing party is expected to take place at Willow Street for this epic clash.

16. Here Without You Tishman- Gallo (LW rank: 15)

This is tough. We don't want to rip him. But Tishman might be headed for back-to-back last place finishes. Malik "Bruce" Willis dropped 25 points for Tishman in week 3 and the team still only mustered 64 points. That's akin to the Jake Fromm Giants offense. Everyone remembers. If everyone were healthy this team might not be the worst, but they still wouldn't be average. Tyreek "Solomon" Hill is severely hampered while Tua remains concussed, and AJ Brown has an ongoing hamstring issue. This negates the one major advantage Tishman had with elite receivers. The dual Ravens tight end strategy marches on even though Isaiah Likely and Mark "Erin" Andrews have both looked like dirt since week one. When asked for comment about how he intends to approach the next few weeks Tishman was quoted as saying "I have Bucky...". Tishman sits with a projection of 72 points in week 4.

Next up: Tishman takes on the surging Cap Stoppers as he looks to end the losing streak.
