

Free Chee Week 6 Power Rankings

Tier 1- Title Favorites

1. Stewed C- Joey

THE STEWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWW. Stew got outstanding news today with the leaks that Drake Maye will be starting this weekend. Just as Gardner Minshew exits, Maye enter for Stew. Timing couldn't be better. The committee's models favored Maye as the best quarterback in the draft this past year due to several factors. Size, arm strength, and skin pigmentation were among Maye's highest rated attributes by our scouts. If Maye works out, there really won't be a hole on this team. Jayden Daniels and Saquon should continue to make Stewed HQ very happy.

Looking ahead: Stew takes on his neighbor Sweeney, who resides right around the corner. A conflict of two 4-1 teams, we expect this matchup to be the most-watched game of the season thus far in Free Chee.

2. Sansa Ludacris- Chris

Sansa was able to put up 149 even without Jonathan Taylor in the lineup. This team is so deep, Rashee "Piece of Shit" Rice can be dead in a ditch and Sansa doesn't miss a beat. He bounces back from a tough loss last week by crushing the Gotham Rogues. Having said that, the injury to Derek "Dicaprio" Carr on Monday night gives the committee pause. With Carr expected to miss multiple weeks, Spencer "Ugly Retard" Rattler will be pressed into action for the Saints. Credit to Sansa for scooping Rattler off the wire as insurance.

Looking ahead: Sansa takes on the greatest 0-5 team Yahoo Fantasy has ever seen. Marvin's Receiver Room has yet to secure a win despite a seriously prolific offensive output. With Bob Saleh newly unemployed, perhaps Marvin can hire him to get his defense in order.

3. Life with Derrick- Justin

It was a close call between Derrick and Gorlock for 3rd, but the committee couldn't get past the herculean upside of the Ja'Marr Chase & Derrick Henry duo. Over the past 3 weeks, those two wildebeest have combined for 149.5 points. That's damn near 25 points per game each. If those two keep it up, Derrick is going to be very hard to beat. There are some weaknesses, like none of his quarterbacks are awesome, but with 3 legitimate starters it's hard to chirp. You've got teams out here starting Will Levis. The biggest concern might be the fact that he's starting a man named Emanuel Wilson. Apparently, Emanuel attended college at Fort Valley State University. Has to be cap, right? Nonetheless, Ja'Marr and Derrick are elite.

Looking ahead: Derrick faces off with a hard charging Deserves to be Shot team. Shot's team hasn't lived up to expectations yet, but rides in with a 3-2 record.

4. Gorlock the Destroyer- Simon

This team is nasty. The differentiator between Derrick and Gorlock was that the committee deemed Justin Jefferson and Joe Burrow as slightly smaller threats to society than Ja'Marr Chase and Derrick Henry. But we certainly believe Gorlock could win the title. With Geno "Atkins" Smith and Burrow playing at an elite level, Gorlock boasts arguably the best QB duo in the league to pair with his star level skill talent. Rumors suggest the ownership at the Avalon has hired Mikey, Sadie and their crew to sing opera to Gorlock's front office as a treat for elite management so far this season.

Looking ahead: Gorlock takes on a formidable opponent in Cap Stoppers this week. Current odds actually have Cap Stoppers as a slight favorite at -125. Could be a trap but the committee loves a play on Gorlock's moneyline at+100 this week.

5. Hand me the Piss- TK

Piss takes a tumble from the top spot this week after a hard-fought loss to fellow Bloomfield inmate Alexander's Unreal Team. Even still, the fundamentals of this roster remain strong. There are no glaring holes with plenty of room for upside. For instance, Patrick Mahomes has yet to break 18 points in a game this year. And yet some people call him the "GOAT". The committee personally would rather field Jay Cutler but to each their own. It also appears Evan Engram will be returning to the field this week to give Piss a boost at tight end.

Looking ahead: Piss gets to take on Senior Al Coke this week. Coke may be bringing his two ketamine fueled cheerleaders to the game but we trust Piss' coaches to keep the team focused and blow them out.

6. Marvin's Receiver Room

Some less-renowned rankings systems like those out of Portland and Beijing might point to Marvin's 0-5 record as proof of a poor team. The good news is the scholars that build our models don't think like that. Marvin is essentially a tossup (48% win probability) this week against Sansa (2nd best team in the league). Does he need to fix his defense? Certainly. He's given up 82 more points than any other team so far. Do we believe Hudson Street has a plan? Tough to say. Marvin has some ballers and AOCs time has come. With the single best player in football so far carrying his team, Marvin cannot be ruled out for making a late run to the postseason. It would be a first in league history if he does make it after an 0-5 start. Moneyline this week.

Looking ahead: Get a bucket of cheese balls and watch Marvin pull off his first win of the season. Dobbins anytime.

7. Cap Stoppers
8. Sweeney.

You could make a strong argument for Sweeney. over Cap Stoppers here but the injury to Nico “Phil” Collins could prove disastrous. League insiders reported yesterday on MSNBC that Nico will be placed on IR and miss at least 4 weeks. Both these teams are clear playoff teams but may lack the juice that some of the true title contenders above have. Another distinction the committee saw between these two was the Stoppers’ stealthy acquisition of Tucker “Carlson” Kraft in the dead of night. Kraft, well known at the Green Bay BK for ordering 4 or 5 Quad Stackers at a time, is projecting as a top five tight end for us the rest of the year. Injuries and criminal activity have depleted Green Bay’s receiver corps and Kraft will be a key cog for Jordan Love going forward. Having said that, Sweeney. isn’t far behind and that’s why we lumped these two together. The committee will admit defeat on Daniel “Boone” Jones. We thought he was an abysmal fantasy choice but even without Nabers this week he produced. Credit to Sweeney.

Looking ahead: Cap Stoppers faces a stiff test as Gorlock visits Soho and Sweeney. takes on Stewed C. Both have roughly 42% chance to win per metrics.

9. Deserves to be Shot

The coaching staff of this team is really pulling off an all-time balancing act here. The team has mostly played like shit and yet they sit at 3-2, well within striking distance as we approach the midway point of the season. They’ve just been waiting, assessing, plotting strategically. It’s been heard that the plan is to continue to squeak out wins for the next month or so and then really turn it on. At that point, Josh “Tim” Allen and Bijan Robinson will stop playing like cock and proceed to put up 27 per week (each). Then Chase “Emmett” Brown will be so good that he’ll force the Bengals to become a run first team. If this plan formulates as expected, it’s likely we’re talking about Deserves to be Shot as the title favorite come Thanksgiving.

Looking ahead: Tough matchup with Life with Derrick this week. Tyler Conklin has had this one circled on his calendar for quite a while after Derrick passed on him in the draft.

10. Work Ass- Sweeney

Work Ass got on the board this week with an annihilation of Tishman. It's not exactly what you call a "statement win", but after starting 0-4 Work Ass will take what he can get. The part that intrigues the committee is the Joe Flacco piece of things. Flacco dropped 26 to carry Work Ass to victory alongside Drake London. Overall, we're not sure this team has enough to climb its way back into the playoff race. It would probably take quite the effort from Rich Man's Desmond Ridder and DeVonta Smith. Dontayvion Wicks does present the potential for serious upside, however. With Christian Watson and Romeo "Dickhead" Doubs out, Wicks has been eating targets from Jordan "Spieth" Love.

Looking ahead: Work Ass will do battle with Ger as he flies in from Austin this week to try to get to .500 on the year. Considering his QB situation, that would be quite the feat from Ger.

11. Alexander's Unreal Team- Deez

Deez was victorious in the intra-Bloomfield duel this past week weekend riding Caleb Williams and a string of solid but unspectacular performances from the rest of his roster. He had 5 gentlemen with between 8 and 14 points. That's just great coaching. At 3-2 AUT is far from cooked, but a lot of his players are just sturdy veterans without much upside. Najee (boots), Amari (rapist QB), Kyle Pitts (brain damage) and Stafford (Ricky at left tackle) all have factors outside their control that limit their upside for the rest of the season. In 74% of our projections AUT finished between 8th and 11th place at the end of the season. Perhaps if Jonathan "Herb" Brooks gets healthy, that can provide a spark for this team. Brooks was a very highly touted draft prospect and would look divine taking handoffs from Andy Dalton.

Looking ahead: AUT hosts WHERESTUA in a matchup of amicable teams. We expect to see lots of hugs and backslaps on the field after this one.

12. Gotham Rogues- Pig with Hair

This team isn't very good, but he has a few things going for him. CJ "Chester Julius" Stroud and Kirk "Dirk" Cousins are humming right now. Just an absolute masterclass of QB play from those two this past weekend. It was so good in fact that Jon Gruden and his buddies were seen on IG live doing afters and breaking down the film. Type of stuff you love to see. Furthermore, it seems like Roschon Johnson and Bronny James are getting more involved for the offenses in their respective teams. On the flip side, Gotham doesn't have one running back who's a true workhorse and had Tutu Atwell in his lineup last week. Maybe he can give Aaron Judge a call? Judge was once a formidable football player and it's been said the "Mr. July" nickname is really getting to him. Food for thought.

Looking ahead: Pig has a great opportunity to get to .500 this week as he faces off against injury riddled Here Without You Tishman.

13. Champagne Suitcase Kiss Face- Ger

This is the type of stuff that builds league champions. Ger was seen working the wire like nobody has seen since peak Billy Beane. First, he places 3 waiver claims this week and gets them all. Picking up Darius Slayton, Chase “Sarah” McLaughlin and the Chargers D while shipping Jordan Whittington, Harrison Butker and KC D to the wire. But here’s the kicker. He then wakes up at 5:30 CT, has a bowl of oatmeal and scans the landscape. We have it on good authority he couldn’t pass up Dare “Chief” Ogunbowale and so drops Darius Slayton for him. Two hours after he had just used his waiver claim to add Slayton to his roster. Credit to him. Also, great work with the close win over Cap Stoppers. Tyrone “Bill” Tracy Jr. is a horse.

Looking ahead: Showdown with Work Ass on the road. Is he nervous? It’s been the subject of much debate around the water cooler at Newark Street.

14. Senior Al Coke Twins- Book D

This team might not be so bad? Considering the GM threw 40% of his budget out the window taking a guy with no Achilles’, we will give him his flowers for building a functional roster. Brock “Lesnar” Purdy is captaining a plucky team with underdogs like Chuba Hubbard and Zack Moss. He may have suffered a loss this week but there is hope on the horizon. For one, he can take Taysom Hill out of the lineup and actually play Josh Downs. Downs is good at football. And two, he has hired outside consultants headlined by a group of investors from McSwiggans to help uncover trade value for the rest of the season. Al Coke is no longer the odds-on favorite to eat a shitload of food in January.

Looking ahead: Hand me this Piss looks to take out his anger from last week’s loss on Al Coke. If I were Al Coke, I would consider wearing a riot shield this Sunday.

15. WHERESTUA

16. Here Without You Tishman

Nobody likes to do it to them. Injuries right now have just cooked these teams right now and due to the uncertainty, we have to rank them low. But our models are accounting for a lot of variances with both rosters. Most of it hinges on the health of one Tua Tagovailoa, given that WHERESTUA has Tua and Tishman has both Tyreek and Raheem Mostert. Tua’s return would push WHERESTUA into the playoff contender tier and it would make Tishman a lot less bad. Tishman’s QB situation is still pretty dire, but a healthy combo of Tyreek and AJ Brown plus Bucky is a big improvement over what this team looked like two weeks ago. For WHERESTUA, he may have stolen value acquiring Tank Bigsby before the breakout. This guy seems to be the Jaguars RB1 going forward and could provide serious value as we head deeper into October.

Looking ahead: WHERESTUA plays Alexander's Unreal Team in a pleasant match and Tishman play host to the hulking ogres of Gotham. Gotham vs Tishman is expected to be a low scoring slugfest. First to 65 may actually win that one.
