

Free Chee Week 3 Power Rankings

Tier One: WDTDI

1. Stewed C- Tishman

Stewed C drafted a fairly decent squad. Saquon has performed great so far even after that disastrous drop on Monday night. Couldn't imagine what he felt like after that one right? But the real reason Stewed is number one is because he got the steal of the draft in Alvin Kamara for only $15. Kamara is the #1 scorer in the league through two weeks. It's also looking like Brock Bowers will prove to be CHEEEEEAAAAPPPPPP at his $3 price. The balding tight end has 17 targets through two weeks in the Raiders' Gardner Minshew led attack. If there is one area of concern for this roster, it is quarterback. Jayden Daniels has been solid so far but relying so heavily on a rookie and could prove the downfall of Stewed C. Drake Maye has yet to see the field and the performance of rookie quarterbacks outside of Daniels is downright abysmal. League HQ suspects Stewed C is concerned about peaking too soon and being ruined come playoff time.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: acquire Theo Johnson as tight end insurance. The rookie has clear upside in a high-powered Giants passing offense.

2. Hand me the Piss- TK

Hand me the P is fielding a well-rounded roster so far. It seems he learned from his past mistakes by getting two high level quarterbacks this year. Historians still remember the Drew Lock debacle of 2022. The Dak and Mahomes duo should carry him, but what separates Hand me the P is Jordan "George" Mason. As long as Christian McCaffrey is out, Mason will perform like an RB1. Rumors suggest the front office at Bloomfield was popping bottles when they heard McCaffrey's Achilles was made of paper. Couldn't imagine dropping $77 on a guy with no Achilles. And while the Jets may stink, Breece "No Neck" Hall is living up to his billing as a fantasy superstar so far. Certain members of the league office believe he bears a striking resemblance to a resident of Monroe Street. Makes you think. We fully expect Hand me the Piss to be in the mix for the title come January.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Get Darnell Mooney some touches.

3. Sansa Ludacris- Chris

Some members of the rankings committee made a case that Sansa should've been ranked first. Others chose to dock him for employing known felons like Rashee Rice, so he falls to 3rd. Similar to Piss, Sansa has a very well-rounded team with no clear holes. Sansa's work in the draft was unbelievable. He secured 3 good starters for a combined $20 in Zay "Ereck" Flowers, Rashee Rice, and Brian Robinson Jr. Meanwhile, you've got other front offices spending $32 on injured Hawaiians like Puka. What a freak. Even Sansa's depth looks great with playable options like Christian Kirk, Chone Figgins, and Courtland Sutton on the bench. In 73% of our simulations, Sansa secures a top 4 seed. The one area of concern for Sansa is tight end. Dalton Kincaid came into the season with a lot of hype but has yet to see many targets.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: take a look at Devaughn Vele. Many of our scouts think this guy will be Bo Nix's WR1 by Halloween.

4. Gorlock the Destroyer- Papi

Gorlock's stars and scrubs approach is working so far. Gorlock spent 91.5% of his budget on 5 players. If those guys continue to ball out, this team is going to be pretty good. If he suffers injuries to any of those 5, he may be looking at consuming an alarming amount of food and beverage next January. Unfortunately for Gorlock, Justin "Thomas" Jefferson and Kenneth Walker are both banged up already. If either of these gentlemen miss time, Gorlock will be relying on the DUI King Jordan Addison to produce big time. With a difficult schedule coming up, Gorlock needs his guys on the field, or he'll end up down with Al Coke Twins in short order. The next 3 weeks Gorlock will face off with three currently undefeated programs in Hand Me the Piss, WHERESTUA, and Stewed C.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Get Burrow a haircut.

5. Deserves to be Shot- Mitch

Pros and cons with this team, but Shot has some absolute horses on this roster. Josh Allen might average more points than Kobe in '06, Pollard looks like prime Priest Holmes, and Rhamondre Stevenson blends the speed of Tyreek with the power of a John Deere tractor. Sweeney should be quaking in his boots this week. You could argue there are some concerns. Like did he overpay for Bijan? Do his receivers suck cock? Tough to say for certain. But with Bryce Young's benching he has acquired the ever-valuable 3rd starting QB and trade offers have been pouring in. The league office fully expects he'll receive at least WR2 value in return for Andy Dalton.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Get a decent receiver

6. Tony the Phenom- Justin

Let's start with the challenges. Bo Nix is pretty fucking bad. And Tony is rostering a fullback for some reason. Having said that, he's got some real players here. Trevor Lawrence, commonly known as Peyton Manning with Long Hair, is poised for a breakout season. Justin Fields looks like a real player away from the fantasy wasteland of Chicago. Jamarr "Vincent" Chase had better perform if he wants that new contract. Derrick Henry and David Montgomery ought to eat touchdowns for their respective teams. And with injuries to CMC and Deebo, George Kittle should be a focal point of the offense in San Francisco. While Tony is off to a slow start with less than 200 points through two weeks, the rankings committee thinks this a great opportunity to buy low.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Play Justin Fields instead of Bo Nix

7. Marvin's Receiver Room- Zaukas

Tough schedule so far for Marvin. He's 6th in points for but sits at 0-2. It'll be a tough climb to make the playoffs but with the talent Marvin has assembled we think its possible. Lamar Jackson, CeeDee Lamb and Marvin Harrison form a formidable trio for this squad. And getting Jeremiah Kendrick Dobbins for only $2 is highway robbery. It's been rumored the GM had Chick-Fil-A catered for the whole front office this Monday as a show of resolve. Middle management has been working the waiver wire extra hard for the team after the gesture. I think the concern for Marvin is the quarterback position. He has nobody to play behind Lamar unless Aidan O'Connell overtakes Gardner Minshew in Las Vegas. While some of us in the league office still view Wentz as a franchise QB, it seems unlikely he'll beat out Mahomes in Kansas City due to political reasons. Perhaps they'll find some sleeper on the wire to play as a second QB. We'll be watching this one closely.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Trade Michael Pittman before his stock bottoms out

8. Cap Stoppers- TJ

This team has performed quite well so far, but our metrics have some long-term concerns. We even have unsubstantiated reports that Soho was chanting "Stop the cap! Stop the cap!" as the Cap Stoppers pummeled the Gotham Rogues into oblivion on Sunday. The Stoppers just have an all-round solid lineup, but lack of true star power prevents them from being higher. Baker and Rodgers are both legitimately good but maybe not top ten quarterbacks. ETN might lose his job because he's an ogre who can't stop fumbling. And as good as Rashid Shaheed has been, can he really keep this up the whole season? If Achane and Gibbs keep getting 20+ touches a week, the committee feels confident this team will be in the playoffs. Cap Stoppers look to put the nail in the coffin for Work Ass this week as they face off on Grand Street.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Wait for Khalil Shakir's breakout.

9. Sweeney. – Connor

If we ranked him any lower, the committee feared bomb threats at the league office. Let's start with the good for (Sweeney.). Nico "Fort" Collins looks capable of being the overall WR1 this year and has laid waste to the Colts and Bears secondaries to start the year. The injury to Jordan Love hurts, but Jayden Reed is a breakout star. If he has a quarterback who can get him the ball, he's going to pile up some points. The committee's concern lies in the fact that (Sweeney.) has two quarterbacks with limited upside. Justin Herbert is great but with James Joseph Harbaugh committed to running the ball and a lack of receivers, it seems unlikely he'll be throwing for 300 and 3 frequently. And then Daniel Jones. This man has been employed by the Giants for 6 football seasons now and has never been better than average? At best? Jones has to know this is his last year in New York and we fully expect him to throw in the towel sooner rather than later so he can start touching afters 3 times a week. Deebo Samuel injury not great either.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Work the waiver wire for some value

10. Work ass- Sweeney

We don't know if this team is good, but Jalen Hurts and Anthony "Peanut Butter" Richardson have played like dogwater and are still combining for 40 points per game. Imagine if they start playing well? Too early to abandon ship here. Running back is undoubtedly an issue. Rolling out Jaylen Warren and Fat Boy Zeke would be brutal even for Al Coke Twins. Our projections still have Work ass making the playoffs in 47% of simulations so there's a lot of opportunity there. The potential for Trey "Cedric" Benson and Braelon Allen to get more touches as the season progresses would be a boon for this team.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: take a look at Jamaal Willaims

11. Alexander's Unreal team- Deez

We liked this team a lot more last week. Caleb "Homo" Williams looks like he might be in for a long rookie year and the injuries to Cooper Kupp and Puka are limiting Matthew Stafford's ceiling. Joe Mixon is looking like some good value at a $25 and James Conner has been absolutely dialed for that Arizona offense, but there isn't a ton of upside elsewhere on this roster. Jayden Daniels seems allergic to giving Terry McLaurin the ball in a position to succeed. 6 catches for 22 yards last week by McLaurin? Joey in boots could get 22 yards on 6 catches. Kyle Pitts remains the biggest tight end disappointment in modern history and despite multiple attempted surgeries this offseason Najee Harris was unable to remove the cement boots from his feet. Things are looking dire on Bloomfield Street.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Trade Skylar Thompson for a bounty of value

12. WHERESTUA- Ron

The Tua concussion was a brutal blow here. With a healthy Tua, the committee likes this team a lot. The uncertainty around if and can he return pushes WHERESTUA down the rankings. It's unclear if Deshaun "The Rapist" Watson can continue to be so bad while remaining on the field. Our intel suggests the FBI could have him in irons any day now. On the positive side, Josh Jacobs looks like an absolute workhorse in Green Bay. He has 50 touches through 2 weeks and should remain the focal point as long as Jordan Love is hurt. Jonnu Smith is a sleeper here who might be able to carry this team in Tua's absence. Reports out of Dolphins practice suggest Skylar Thompson loves Jonnu. Some have called Jonnu his "security blanket". We expect to see a lot of targets headed Jonnu's way.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Trade for Jameis

13. Gotham Rogues- Boyle

The Rogues should arguably be higher but their management team has rubbed some on the committee the wrong way, so we decided to stick it to them. The best thing the Rogues have going for them is they have two real quarterbacks. Chimney Jose Stroud and Kirk Cousins are a far better duo than what the other teams at the bottom of the rankings are rolling out. Furthermore, Davante "Samuel" Adams seems to still be near his peak as he shredded the Ravens last Sunday. Our biggest concern for this team is running back. The Rogues picked up Antonio Gibson off the wire and he's immediately the best back on the team. Zamir White sucks at football. The Raiders should be relegated from the NFL for thinking that guy is a starting running back. Despite many attempted trades from the Rogues' corrupt GM, he has yet to find a willing trade partner. We suppose that happens when you offer Tofu Johnson for Garrett Wilson.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Start Antonio Gibson

14. Champagne Suitcase Heart Face (emoji stuff)- Ger

Since he has that dumb emoji team name and I can't type those, we will refer to this team simply as Ger. We don't know what that draft strategy was to be frank. He actively targeted 3 of the 5 worst starting quarterbacks in the league. Sam Richard Darnold might actually work out so credit to Ger there. But Bryce Young. Was he kidding? The single worst draft pick in the history of football and Ger spent $15 on him? Nobody gets. Will Levis may have mud for brains but it seems like he can sling the rock around a little so at least that's something. Amon-Ra is a bona fide horse, and he'll need to carry this team if Ger hopes to avoid spending a long while at the Golden Corral buffet guzzling Budweiser next January.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Build a time machine to redraft

15. Here Without You Tishman- Gallo

Quite the team he's got here. Injuries are kinda decimating him. Jordan Love is cooked for a few weeks. Tyreek is cooked as long as Skylar T is throwing him puck. Antonio Brown is cooked with a hamstring injury. Wandle Robinson is cooked because he plays for the Giants. Rumors are HQ on Monroe is already preparing for next year's draft and implementing eating challenge again. Credit to him. If the committee wanted to think positively, we would praise the Samaje Perine pickup because Samaje is a truck. And we love the dual Ravens tight end strategy. It's always a good sign when you can go with two tight ends. Especially if they're on the same team. At least he's not Al Coke right? Here Without You Tishman is +450 underdog this week against Stewed C.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: Tough to say

16. Senior Al Coke Twins- Mikey

I almost feel bad. Al Coke spent nearly 40% of his budget on Christian McCaffrey and then the gutless, cowardly, scumbag 49ers revealed he was hiding an Achilles injury. And Al Coke unfortunately did not even get Jordan Mason as a handcuff. He's ruined. Brock has been fine, and Zack "Santana" Moss is decent, but almost everybody else on this team stinks. Travis "Retarded Pussy" Kelce belongs in a zoo. Al Coke is averaging 65 points per game. You could probably start all Giants and average 65 points per game. Projections give Al Coke a -13% percent chance to make the playoffs. We hear Al Coke and Here Without You Tishman are formulating a team-up strategy at McSwiggins this Thursday (at noon). Even if you combined their rosters, they might be still be worse than the Gotham Rogues.

Algorithm's roster suggestion: get a bag